

FCC exists to regulate use of America's airwaves in the public interest. So regulate already. Not only do you need to refuse further deregulation being proposed, you need to impose new regulations that require at least a small amount of time devoted to public service broadcasting as the price of licensing a part of the available bandwidth. If you believe that government exists to serve the public you should regulate in the public interest, not the interest of media corporations! Remember what you're there for.

Faye Colburn